REGION IGT Rubicone

IGT Rubicone is in the Emilia-Romagna region famed for Parma Ham, Parmesan Cheese, Ferrari, and Lamborghini. The name is taken from the famous Rubicon River, crossed by Julius Caesar at the start of the Great Roman Civil War (49-45 BC). The region is based around the coastal towns of Rimini and Ravenna on Italy's east coast facing the Adriatic Sea where the fertile river plain meets the Apennine mountains to the south and south west. The vineyard soil is sandstone-clay while a climate of hot summers with temperature moderation from the sea produce ripe yet fresh and fruity Sangiovese wines.

TASTING NOTES

The wine has a medium intensity showcasing a ruby red color with youthful purplish hues; a pleasant aroma of ripe red fruits with notes of dried violet and preserved red cherries. The wine is fresh on the palate with a core of red fruits, moderate well-balanced tannins and the classic refreshing Sangiovese finish.
